Headline: Comview Moves Data Center to New Location Due to Continued Growth of the Company

Huntington, NY---August 4, 2004---Comview Corporation, a leading telecommunications solution provider, recently announced that they have moved their data center to a new location in order to help meet the challenges faced by the expanding growth of their business architecture.

On June 18th, Comview Corporation successfully made the transition from their old data center to the new, which resides at one of the largest Internet Service Provider and Web Hosting companies on Long Island. The features and benefits associated with the new data center help to meet the growing needs of Comview's clients. Outsourcing allows Comview to not only provide their clients with enhanced service capabilities, but to stay up-to-date on cutting edge technologies as well. Comview also now has access to and is able to leverage top-quality resources, hardware, software, network infrastructure, and development and support staff.

The new data center provides a high-speed, extremely reliable and secure data center solution to Comview and their customers. The data center features enhanced bandwidth, more redundancy, and increased reliability, housing four carriers. In moving, Comview purchased all new hardware from Dell to assist in a smooth transition. Security has also increased with an improvement in firewalls, virus scanning, and authentication services. The center is staffed with 24 x 7 customer and technical support to handle a variety of different technical issues as well as to continually monitor and ensure the safety of Comview's data.

John Perri, President of Comview Corporation, commented, "The decision to move our data center was an easy one based on the emerging needs of our business," he continued, "Our goal is to expand our services with client's needs to provide them with the most customized and reliable solution as possible."
