Headline: Comview Introduces their Automated Wireless Cost Management Suite of Services

Huntington, NY---September 12, 2004---Comview Corporation, a premier telecommunications solution provider, recently introduced their Automated Wireless Cost Management suite of services, offering their clients yet another cost-savings solution by merging the best of high level telecommunications consulting with ongoing management and reduction of wireless expenses.

The automated service is based on four main modules which are responsible for streamlining internal administration management as well as reducing wireless expenditures. These services significantly reduce company administration time through the ongoing management and automated processing of all wireless activity. The service also assists in reducing wireless expenses by establishing usage rules, setting call activity parameters, and optimizing calling plans on an ongoing basis. It has been proven that overall call usage declines as employees become aware of monitoring programs in place within their organization.

One component of the service allows administrators to define parameters for corporate wireless user call activity. This is in an effort to create coherent wireless usage policies within the company. Administrators are also able to view individual user cellular phone call charges and usage detail in a logical and organized format, eliminating the need for any administrative tasks associated with billing.

Additionally, the service assists in transitioning from employee liable to corporate liable plans as a basis for intelligent management, greater access to data, and more control over wireless call activity. The service also has an ongoing optimization plan to provide cost-savings to companies, which recommends an ideal future calling plan to individual users based on viewing past call history. Finally, the service includes extensive monthly reporting which assists telecom department managers in monitoring the company's wireless activity in order to reduce expenses. The usage detail for companies can also be combined with Comview's web based call accounting services for single point of access for all of the company's telecommunications usage expenses.
